The Educated Student: Embedding General Education Competencies in Courses

What does it mean to be an educated person in today's global world? What is the role of our individual courses in helping students be educated participants in our diverse society? Join us as we explore, through hands on activities, examples and discussion, Montgomery College's chosen General Education Competencies, how they fit into our individual classrooms and their importance in helping our students achieve academic excellence. In addition to learning about MC's Gen Ed Competencies, we will explore easy ways of giving students the opportunity to learn and practice selected competencies through assignments and feedback. (1.5hrs)

Outcomes

Participants will be able to:

- identify MC's Gen Ed competencies and explain the role and value of these competencies in their teaching.
- develop and implement strategies for incorporating selected Gen Ed competencies into their courses.
- develop usable assignments, rubrics and/or feedback sheets that give students the opportunity to learn and master general education competencies.

Tuesday, March 2, 2009, 2:30 to 4:00pm, RV, HU 118

To register,
1. Log into MyMC
2. Select the Training and Dev. Tab,
3. Scroll down to the CTL section
4. Click on Register for Workshop
5. Scroll to the workshop title in
6. Select the check box next to the session you wish to register for.

For more information or to schedule a session for a specific group, please contact,

Samantha Streamer-Veneruso
Phone: 240-567-7940 or
E-mail: samantha.veneruso@montgomerycollege.edu