

In honor of International Women's Day and Women's History Month, distinguished social theorist Patricia Hill Collins will present

Black Feminism, Intersectionality, and Democratic Possibilities

Patricia Hill Collins

Collins is a distinguished university professor at the University of Maryland. Her research and scholarship examines issues of race, gender, social class, sexuality, and nation.

Wednesday, March 8, 2017 • 6:30 p.m.
Reception to follow at 8 p.m.

Cultural Arts Center Theater 1 (CU 146), Montgomery College Takoma Park/Silver Spring Campus
Reservations strongly suggested. Tickets available at montgomerycollege.edu/cac

Free parking available in Lot W1 and the student spaces of the West Campus Garage. Paid overflow parking is available in the public garage on the west side of Georgia Avenue off King Street.

To reserve space for classes or to request disability accommodations contact Professor M. Bess Vincent, bess.vincent@montgomerycollege.edu, by March 1.

Sponsored by the Montgomery College Education and Social Sciences Area, Women's and Gender Studies Program, the Cultural Arts Center, and Takoma Park/Silver Spring Student Life

